Rubis had an especially brilliant 2017 despite the rapid increase in petroleum product prices which led the market to worry about pressure on unit margins. The apparent stabilisation in oil prices, the full-year consolidation of acquisitions from 2017, and the ongoing capacity increases all augur well for 2018.

2017 results in line with our estimates and the consensus With sales up 31% (already reported on 8 February, but not representative due to the fluctuations in petroleum product prices) along with overall volume growth of 19% at Rubis Energie and 11% at Rubis Terminal, EBITDA rose 21% to €496m (SGe €495m, Factset consensus: €495m), EBIT advanced 23% to €368m (SGe €365m, consensus: €362m), reported net profit increased 28% to €266m (SGe €276m, consensus: €260m), EPS climbed 22% to €2.84 (SGe €2.84, consensus: €2.80) and the dividend was lifted 12% to €1.50/share (SGe €1.50, consensus: €1.58). Rubis Energie (EBIT +27% to €254m): 1) the unit margin gained +1% all products combined, despite the nearly 50% jump in purchasing costs; 2) the acquisitions made in Haiti and Madagascar generated a strong contribution (+€46m) and turned out to be more profitable than the group initially expected; and 3) there was a sharp rebound in the bitumen sector in Africa (EBIT +65%) after problems in 2016. Rubis Terminal (EBIT +29% to €69m): 1) flat EBIT in France but strong growth in Rotterdam and Antwerp (new capacity came on-stream) and Turkey (rapid growth in the transit business with Iraq); and 2) 100% consolidation of Turkey. Rubis Support & Services (EBIT +2% to €64m): 1) flat contribution from SARA; and 2) trade/supply in fuel.

Well managed financial structure Despite €206m in capex and €513m spent on acquisitions in 2017, gearing stayed at just 33% (SGe 33%) and leverage came to 1.4x (SGe 1.4x). Rubis has not ruled out the possibility of making larger-sized acquisitions, nor has it excluded a potential tapping of the market in the event of a major deal.

Management is very confident in 2018, and they expect double-digit earnings growth In the first two months of the year, overall volumes grew further, and the likely stabilisation in petroleum product prices creates a much more favourable market situation for Rubis than in 2017.
